THE CUNNING COBBLER -- Many years ago, the busband of an old lady, living in Buckinghamshire, died without making his will, for the want of which necessary precaution his estate would have passed away from his widow, had she not resorted to the following expedient to avert the loss of her property. She concealed the death of her hu-band, and prevailed on an old cobbler, her neighbor, who was, in person, som what like the deceased, to go to bed at her house, and personate him. with us that they will be executed promptly. in which character it was agreed that he should dietate a will, leaving the widow the estate in question. An attorney was sent for to draw up the writings. The widow, who, on his arrival, appeared in great affliction at her good man's danger, began to ask questions of her pretended husband, calculated to elicit the answers she expected and desired. The combler, grouning aloud, and looking as much like a person going to give up the ghost as no sible, feebly answered, "I intend to leave you half of my estate, and I think the poor old shoemaker, who lives opposite, is deserving the other half, for he has always been a good neighbor." The widow was thunderstruck at receiving a reply so different from that which she expected, but dared not negative the cobbler's will, for fear of loosing the whole of the property; while the old rogue in bed-who was himself the poor old shoemaker living opposite -laughed in his sleeve, and divided with her the fruits of a project which the widow had intended for her sole benefit.

M. Laboulage has sent a note to the Paris papers seconding an appeal made to French patriotism by the committee of the France-Amcriesa Union, which urges that a monument should be raised on an island near New York ets at to commemorate the declaration of American Independence.
